

Introducing a S.T.A.R. Compass for Children

With just five words and three steps, a child can learn how to make thoughtful choices.

All too often, a child acts without thinking about his/her actions or the impact that his/her choice may have on others.

To reduce that spontaneous behavior, this program teaches all three parts of any event that will either hurt other children i.e. bullying or teasing or promote kindness and respect.

Our ABCs of Caring Choices workshop provides an easy way for teachers, parents, and caregivers to teach children how to be more conscious of their choices and be a 'STAR' for making conscious, caring choices.

Most Amazing Feature of this STAR Compass:

It unites teachers and parents mentally/virtually; yet allows everyone to use their own instruction to teach kindness.

To help young children who may be prone to making choices unconsciously or hastily, this process shows a child how to be more conscious of his/her choices.

Because 80% of learning happens visually, both kinds of choices are demonstrated visually and verbally to emphasize thoughtfulness of others when making a choice that affects other children.

A me-based choice is visually taught as an 'imbalanced choice' by standing on one foot while a we-based choice (ME and U) is shown by standing with both feet solid on ground to symbolize a choice that's good for both people.

This S.T.A.R. compass has a positive impression with children because a star is the most common symbol a child receives for good behavior and excellence in his academic efforts.

Similar to a policeman's badge being in the shape of a star, a child is taught to be his own 'personal protector' (policeman) using this 'STAR' method if he is treated in any manner absent of respect.

For a free consultation, call 949-378-4126 today to learn how this can help you teach young children kindness

Aneta ThinkOfAll